
ASJOG

Volume 3 Number 1

The Wonderful Taste of Achievement

The appearance of a new issue of ASJOG is always a celebrated event in Ain Shams University Women's Hospital.

It gives me special joy to present to our readers this particular issue of ASJOG; since it marks the start of the third volume. ASJOG will celebrate its birthday soon! As time passes, we all become more and more confident and proud of this achievement. The numbers of our regular readers continue to grow and our website has become extremely popular

The contents of this issue memories from the history of medicine are presented in an article on the history of Obstetrics and Gynecology in Pharaonic Egypt; together with a tour of updates on modern medicine, in the form of articles covering all subspecialties of our profession; and a look into the future, with articles on topics like HPV vaccines, ovarian function preservation, non-invasive prenatal diagnosis and new drugs soon to become available on the market. As usual, we continue to present articles discussing the ethical, political and ideological aspects of medicine in Egypt. Finally, I hope you find this issue useful and enjoyable.

Chief Editor
Prof. Mahmoud El Shourbagy